Recently, the Railway Administration had to face embarrassment when Inspection Carriages of two senior officers were attached to a light engine proceeding on loco account to its home shed. The issue attracted attention in media and also became a subject of discussion in Parliament.

2. It may be reiterated to all concerned that Inspection Carriages are strictly meant for inspections and should not be used as a means of transportation. Whenever Inspection Carriages are utilized, specific purpose for which they have been used should be logged and it must be ensured that they are attached to a working train, only exception being proceeding to attend an emergency situation such as serious accidents and other calamities, etc.
